Annual Report
Fiscal Year 2018
Who We Are.

With community residents leading the way, the mission of Cypress Hills Local Development Corporation (CHLDC) is to build a strong, sustainable Cypress Hills and East New York, where youth and adults achieve educational and economic success, secure healthy and affordable housing, and develop leadership skills to transform their lives and community.

CHLDC provides comprehensive services to more than 11,000 Cypress Hills and East New York residents each year.

Together, our programs strengthen the area’s physical and economic infrastructure, provide quality educational and social services, and foster local leaders.

We preserve and expand the community’s affordable housing stock and strengthen the local workforce by partnering with local employers and matching residents with living-wage jobs.

We make Cypress Hills a greener, more environmentally sustainable neighborhood and act as a resource to local businesses.

We support youth development, and foster leadership and engagement among neighborhood residents so that they can make the changes they want to see in their community.
Dear Friends:

This year marks the 35th anniversary of Cypress Hills Local Development Corporation. We are super proud of all we've accomplished over the past three and a half decades--500+ affordable housing units built, hundreds of young people helped to secure their college degrees and enter the workforce, thousands of children cared for and educated in high quality after-school programs, community centers and summer camps and many generations of community leaders supported in fighting for safe and affordable housing, just and equitable land use policies and greater bank reinvestment and an end to school overcrowding and the school to prison pipeline.

In this past year alone we completed the first ever senior housing development in the neighborhood, started work on bringing a community center to Cypress Hills along with 275 units of deeply and permanent affordable housing and expanded our college access and youth development programs. Thanks to our partnerships with elected and public officials, private supporters and the residents, houses of worship and small businesses of Cypress Hills and East New York, we've made great strides in revitalizing the community.

Yet, so much more remains to be done. New York City is in grips of a period of hyper-gentrification which threatens to displace low and moderate income residents, small businesses and manufacturers. We need to find the policies and approaches that will stem the tide. Nationally and in our neighborhood, families are being torn apart due to this federal administration's cruel immigration policy. We need to educate, organize and remain united to realize our vision of Cypress Hills/East New York as a bastion of opportunities and supports for all people!

CHLDC will remain steadfast in our goals to assist low-income families secure quality affordable housing, help develop adults and youth into future leaders of the neighborhood, protect small businesses and ensure young graduate for college. We hope that you enjoy the highlights of our work and the success stories in this annual report.

Thank you all for our continued support!
Sincerely,

Michelle Neugebauer

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, Cypress Hills underwent a period of rapid neighborhood changes: systemic disinvestment by city government and banks, the flight of long-time residents and the loss of local businesses—devastating Fulton Street, the main commercial street in Cypress Hills. Schools were tremendously overcrowded, and there were no afterschool programs or publicly funded daycare centers in the community. Crime, drugs, and gun violence were also problems in the neighborhood—crack was sold openly on Fulton street corners. Cypress Hills Local Development Corporation (CHLDC) was founded by local residents and merchants in response to these changes. The community members sought to revitalize and improve Cypress Hills and East New York through a community development approach, providing services for families from early childhood through the golden years with strong community leadership and advocacy. Over the decades, our organization has gone from a one-program organization with an annual budget of $35,000 to one with a budget of over $16,000,000 with seven program divisions.

In the past 35 years, we...

- won the creation of three new school buildings
- started the Cypress Hills Child Care Corporation with high-quality early childhood education to 500+ children a year
- implemented Verde, a long-term plan to build a green and healthy neighborhood
- reduced vacancies on the Fulton Street commercial strip by 2/3
- developed 550 units of affordable housing
- supported 790+ families in becoming homeowners
- helped save 600+ homeowners save their homes from foreclosure
- pioneered a peer counseling model for college access and persistence, helping 1,600+ young people a year
- developed afterschool programs, serving 1,700+ students a year
- helped 10,000+ young people gain first work experience through our Summer Youth Employment program

At our 35th Anniversary Spring Gala event, we raised a record-breaking total of over $115,000 for our youth programs, college access and support services, job training initiatives, community organizing work and efforts to build and preserve affordable housing.
Economic Opportunity

The CHAMPION Network is our employment program that serves young adults ages 18-30, focusing on the transportation culinary and construction industries. The program begins with an intensive 10-day group process of initiation and work readiness training. The training strengthens participants’ skills in listening, speaking, organization, respect, feedback, problem solving, goal setting, confidence and motivation. The second part of the CHAMPION training focuses on sector specific skills. With our program, our students’ workforce retention rate is double that of the general population being hired.

Over the past year, the Cypress Hills Business Partners grew to 50 business owners from across the neighborhood. Business Partners is a merchants association with the mission to connect, support, and promote small business in Cypress Hills/East New York, strengthening the local economy and expanding workplace opportunities. CHLDC provides supplementary business and support services to its members that address needs such as security, marketing, sanitation/beautification, leasing/purchasing mixed use and retail space and withstanding the pressure of gentrification. One of these business leaders is Chief, pictured below. He is the owner of Roti on the Run, a Caribbean cuisine restaurant located on 3140 Fulton Street. As a business owner of 15 years, he joined the Business Partners association several years ago to facilitate positive change in the neighborhood and his business. Since he joined, he’s helped get trash cans for street corners, more murals on buildings, more frequent street cleanings, and drastically reduced the graffiti issue. Chief remarks that it’s a good feeling to give back to the community.

“It’s a win-win situation for the merchants, because we are getting a more comfortable area for our customers and our businesses through what we do.”

Recently, the Business Partners are working to resolve unfair storefront-awning code violation fines. They are currently working with Council Member Rafael Espinal to introduce a bill in the City Council that would provide education and warnings before merchants are fined for their awnings.
We helped 550 students gain admission to college.

78% of highschool seniors enrolled in our College Access programs will attend college within six months of graduation.

We served over 1,600 students in our afterschool programs.

CHLDC’s College Success Programs help local young people get into college and support them as they continue on their path to a college degree. Our programming includes College STEPS, a college access center; two Student Success Centers (SSCs) based at the Franklin K. Lane High School campus and the Thomas Jefferson campus in East New York; and our College Persistence Program, which works with graduates of our access services who are now in college. We provide individual counseling, group workshops, SAT prep classes, college trips, academic enrichment, and parent engagement activities.

Jerry (pictured below) is a former participant of our College STEPS program and current Cesiah Toro Mullane Scholarship recipient for academic excellence and demonstrated commitment to community service. He is a current senior at Binghamton University, studying for a degree in Philosophy, Politics, and Law. Jerry remarks that the STEPS counselors taught him how to tell his story to colleges, and afterwards helped with filling out his applications and fee waivers, and particularly emphasized the SAT exam preparation. STEPS’ services were very crucial for him. Before, he felt a sense of doubt in his skills when testing for the SAT among other high schoolers from “elite” high schools. However, his engagement with College STEPS helped him grow confident in his abilities and pride in his roots. He says, to this day, the community he developed within College STEPS provides him with a support system to finish up his last year of college.

“They saw something in me when I necessarily didn’t see something in myself, and it just meant a lot to me. Throughout the three years I’ve been in college, they have been really supportive of me and it’s part of the reason I’ve gotten this far.”
Leadership & Advocacy

CHLDC’s youth organizing group, Future of Tomorrow (FOT), campaigns for restorative justice practices and reform in schools in our community and beyond. Pictured below is Matthew, born and raised in Brooklyn, current senior in high school and a student leader of FOT. Since joining FOT in sophomore year, he realized that the issues at his school are not unique, but that they can be issues schools citywide, even statewide, face. “As a student,” Matthew says, “we have the ability to change that, and it was eye-opening to me as a sophomore kid.” He describes FOT as precursor to all the opportunities he’s gotten, and a favorite experience of his was when he flew out to New Mexico for free to attend the Funders Collaborative on Youth Organizing (FYCO) community and movement building conference. There, he participated in workshops on education reform with various different organizations across the country who do similar work as FOT.

75 young people participated in F.O.T.

402 tenants received counseling and 274 tenants organized to improve their buildings through Tenant Organizing and Counseling.

324 community members participated in Rezone organizing.

“I’m more vocal on issues that I would normally pass by. It made it easier to talk to people, it made it easier to make connections with people and help me grow and become more mature. I think outside myself, and not think only in my head. I can really thank FOT for that opportunity.”

At the moment, FOT is tackling many projects, but a large focus is on advocacy for the New York State legislature to the Safe and Supportive Schools Act. If passed, this act would shift New York schools’ policy away from punitive, disciplinary measures—like suspensions and detentions—and towards restorative and remediation practices—like restorative circles and peer mediation.
A Greener Community

For the past eight years, we’ve worked to develop our community into a greener, healthier place to live through our sustainability initiative Cypress Hills Verde. Through Verde, we manage two fresh food markets, support low-income residents in applying for Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), provide cooking demonstrations and nutrition education workshops, and promote healthy food access in local bodegas and grocery stores.

2,315 neighborhood residents participated in healthy eating and cooking workshops at our neighborhood events.

We helped 579 households receive SNAP benefits.

We helped 42 homeowners avoid foreclosure through mortgage foreclosure prevention counseling.

Our youth-run farm stand, located outside the Cypress Hills Senior Center on Fulton Street, provides a wide variety of locally grown produce to residents. The youth receive training on how to plan and operate a farm stand business, the benefits of eating locally produced fruits and vegetables, and how to think critically about the food in their bodegas and supermarkets. Our Pitkin Verde Farmers Market outside of NYC Health & Hospitals/Gotham Health East New York further expands the access to healthy and natural food. The health center provides families with nutrition education classes, as well as “prescriptions” to eat more fruits and vegetables.

An Affordable Community
Through our partnership with MHANY Management and the Urban Builders Collaborative, we announced the development of Chestnut Commons in November 2017. This huge project will bring 274 new units of affordable housing and a new community center where we will expand our workforce development programming. This CHLDC facility will include classrooms, a teaching kitchen and computer lab for our job training programs and adult education classes, and office and confidential meeting spaces for college counselors, job developers, case managers, and social workers.

One of these senior residents is Soledad, pictured on the left. A resident of Cypress Hills for 28 years, her previous living situation was very taxing on her physically, due to the six-flight walk upstairs to her room and the surrounding noise never allowing her to “get the rest [she] really wanted to get”. Referred to our Affordable Senior Housing application by a family member, she applied immediately. Soledad recounted how thrilled she was when she discovered she’d received housing:

“I couldn’t sleep when they sent me the first letter. ‘You have an apartment’. I just couldn’t believe it. I felt like I won the lotto, though there was no money involved but an apartment, this is like winning the lotto to me.”

Now living in the Senior Housing, Soledad feels at peace in the quiet and relaxing atmosphere, and enjoys connecting with the other residents through sharing homemade food, and the activities held on the first floor-- like movie nights, celebrating birthdays, and barbecues.
